The sides of the inner box are lined with a formulated mixture of rocks, organic waste matter, fertilizer and biochar. The hollow box space is for seedlings and saplings in that the formulation is selected and designed to increase the tree seedling/sapling survival rate by over percent in water-scarce settings. The formulation in the carbon sink planters provides the solution to dryland and degraded soil farming. The box provides a conducive microclimate for plants in dryland fanning, lowers irrigation costs and enrich soil around roots, aiding strong growth in tough conditions capable of accommodating about 200-300 trees per acre .
